Under the New International Shipping Regulations introduced in January 2009, the following simple guidelines must be followed to ship Lithium-Ion mobile phone batteries, which are now considered as hazardous goods:

1. Please do not ship lithium-ion batteries that are damaged. Damaged batteries have the potential producing a dangerous evolution of heat, fire or short circuit.
2. Insert the battery within the handset before shipping. By having the battery inserted, the handset itself acts as a protective casing for the battery.
3. Please do not ship loose batteries without the handset. Loose batteries with exposed terminals may cause a short circuit which may result in dangerous evolution of heat or fire.
4. Please cut out and attach the Caution Label below to each package being shipped. If shipping more than 1 package, please make copies of the Guidelines for Shipping Dangerous Goods Document.
